'West Side Story,' and we're seeing an uptick already," festival chairman and co-producer Charlie Siemon said. As word spreads about performers, "history will prove itself once again with the Mozart concert with Galway and Arnaud Sussmann, [violinist] Itzhak Perlman's protégé." Perlman was the headliner last year.

"Friedman's unbelievable and selling like crazy, so if you want a good seat that's the one you need to hurry," Cynthia P. Brown, chairwoman of Authors & Ideas, said about Thomas Friedman

"One of the things I'm really most proud of is the breadth of presentations," Brown said. She particularly cited Michael Grunwald's talk on his Everglades book March 12 and Clive Thompson's on technology March 10. "Girls Rising," a documentary on nine girls who

The tent actually went up in mid-February, covering events in the amphitheater through April 5. "Festival events go on rain or shine, and typically we've been lucky with the weather in March, but it keeps the seats dry," said Chrissy Biagiotti, the city's community relations manager. "The festival is under cover, but I would suggest making sure you have a jacket or sweater. They have reserved seats, but there are no bad seats in the house."

The festival has the city's OK to use the Delray Beach Downtowner electric carts company, after Siemon appealed to City Council.

"I think the city concurs with the vendor that, as explained, the operation meets city ordinances and they can start whenever they want," said Assistant City Manager Mike Woika.

Some patrons have been using Uber for drop-offs, Biagiotti said.

The festival is managing VIP parking in the lot next to the amphitheater and there will be free or low-cost overflow parking at First United Methodist.

DOWNTOWN LIBRARY.
She suggested festival goers come to Mizner Park early to avoid seasonal traffic. The Dub-liner, Kapow Noodle Bar and Villagio Ristorante are offering 15 percent off checks. Jazzville, Nightlife and Max's Grille have other discounts March 6 through 15, according to a festival release.

Horn and motorcycle noise has also been an issue

"The beauty of having the festival in the amphitheater is, it's an outdoor experience which makes it special; but because it's outdoors we can't control the trains, planes and automobiles," Biagiotti said. "We would appreciate patience...out of courtesy for the performers. It does get crowded and people do have to wait."

The poster features a knight in full armor, including a helmet with a plume, riding a brown horse. The knight is holding a long lance or spear. In the background, there's a faint illustration of a castle or medieval building. The text "FLORIDA RENAISSANCE FESTIVAL 2015" is prominently displayed at the top, with "FLORIDA" in green, "RENAISSANCE" in black, and "FESTIVAL" in blue with a decorative underline. Below this, "2015" is written in red. To the right, the words "AND ARTISAN VILLAGE" are visible. In the lower left, event details are listed: "6 Weekends Feb. 7-Mar. 15 Quiet Waters Park Deerfield Beach". A large bulleted list of attractions follows, including "Over 100 Artisans with Handcrafted Items", "Continuous Entertainment on 10 Stages", "Over 100 Costumed Performers", and "Games, Rides & Food Fit for a King". At the bottom, logos for sponsors like Walgreens, Coca-Cola, and Comcast are shown, along with the website "www.Ren-Fest.com" and phone number "954.776.1642".
