Free summer concerts, movies coming to Mizner

The city of Boca Raton is offering opening acts for the first time in the free 2017 Summer in the City series, with eight concerts including tribute bands and two movies from June 9 through Aug. 12 at Mizner Park Amphitheater.

John Mellencamp also comes to Mizner with Emmylou Harris in an AEG ticketed concert on June 25: "Sad Clowns & Hillbillies." The concert promoter has also booked Slightly Stoopid at Sunset Cove Amphitheater in West Boca on June 24, said Ethan Levinson, senior talent buyer. The Good Vibes Summer Tour 2017 will bring Rebelution to Sunset Cove on July 29 and the band 311 on Aug. 1 on its Unity tour swing. For tickets go to axs.com.

"These three bands fit into the reggae and beach life of Florida," Levinson said. "I'm lucky I have those venues to work with, and with South Florida's unique climate we can have outdoor shows year-round."

At Mizner, the School of Rock house band will perform as the opening act at 7:30 p.m. before each tribute band at 8 p.m., said amphitheater manager Amy DiNorscio.

Zoso, the Led Zeppelin tribute, will kick off the summer series on June 9, with Long Run (The Eagles) playing on June 16 and Liverpool Live (The Beatles) on July 7. DiNorscio noted that this year marks the 50th anniversary of The Beatles' "Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band."

Also on the concert schedule are Turnstiles (Billy Joel) on July 14; Petty Hearts (Tom Petty) on July 21; Dreams: Crystal Visions (Fleetwood Mac) on Aug. 4 and Ruff House (Bob Marley) on Aug. 11. "We did a survey last summer and brought back some of our old favorites like Long Run, Turnstiles, Zoso and Ruff House, and brought in new ones like Liver-

Parks commissioners balk at playground cost overrun

BY MARCI SHATZMAN
STAFF WRITER

Faced with more than a $500,000 overage nearly two months after Sugar Sand Park's Science Playground opened, commissioners who had already approved more than $2 million for the project postponed paying the final bill.

"This is a big number. What caused it was the last three weeks of the project," said Mike Fichera, the Greater Boca Raton Beach & Park District's construction consultant, at the district's May 22 meeting.

More than $250,000 was for labor, mostly overtime, he said. "We had a date the district promised the public the park would open." The playground reopened March 25 and has had more than 54,000 visitors so far, according to Briann Harms, the district's assistant director.

During construction, poles were found to be rotted and had to be replaced, postponing the opening several times. Complicating the matter this time was an unexpected underground electrical box that controls the entire park, Fichera said. At the last minute, 600 bolts and more screening for the top of the three-story playground structure were added, he said.

"We didn't have any choice but to do the work," said Arthur Koski, the district's executive director and legal counsel, citing safety. He said the final change orders would bring the total cost to $3.2 million.

"It's a very tough pill to swallow," said Commissioner Steve Engel. "We're already 50 percent over budget."

"Knowing the project was over budget, why they didn't they tell us?" asked district chairman Robert K. Rollins Jr. The district uses property taxes to fund beach and park renovations and projects, including this one.

schedule, he was under the impression the company would pick up some of the cost, said Commissioner Steven Engel.

A provision in the law gives the contractor certain rights because he could not take on other jobs while finishing this one, explained Koski, a lawyer.

"Mike Fichera went over this with a fine-tooth comb," Koski added. Fichera told commissioners he verified "every piece of paper."

"The contractor was directed to do this and we opened under a TCO [temporary certificate of occupancy]," Koski added. There was no way to predict where the electrical box would be, as the original playground was partly built by community volunteers and there were no records, he added.

Engel asked to be reassured this was the final bill, "and I want to make sure we're protected from future surprises."

Commissioner Craig Ehrnst suggested deferring the decision to approve the bill until all the parties involved "come in and explain it. I'm just baffled," he said. The other commissioners agreed, and Koski was asked to have the structural engineer, designer and construction company attend the May 30 meeting to answer questions.
